“Seven Last Words of Jesus”

Youtube morning and evening devotional presentations
With Rev. Landon Whitsitt

Considering the “Seven Last Words of Jesus” is a historical tradition inviting Christians to contemplate Jesus’ final hours. Through focusing on what Jesus said as he was dying we might come to more fully know his heart, and what God With Us believed to be important as he concluded his mortal journey. Prayer of Easter Morning

Holy Lord –

This is not what we thought Easter would be.
Victory looks like crowds at a parade,
brunch and feasting,
egg hunts and celebrations,
lilies and family and extended family and friends and family,
and loud songs of exuberant praise.

Instead, we find ourselves huddled in locked rooms with your disciples.
We carefully make our way down dim and silent streets with the faithful women attending your tomb.
We stand, each of us alone, in the garden with Mary wondering where everybody is, where you are, and what on God's good earth we are supposed to do.

Call us by name.
Let us hear your voice ringing in our ears and feel your love overflowing in our hearts.
Unite us with the faithful of that first Easter, girded by knowledge and fully understanding that today was not and never was to be about a single day.
Easter is a turning point in history. The first step in being your hands and feet in this world, claiming victory over all the earthly things that
confound us,
cause fear, and
send us into hiding.

Make us bold to proclaim with the first apostle, "I have seen the Lord!"
And as the shadows of this day, and this earthly season pass,
grant us your guiding light
to be the Easter people we claim to be not just Easter Sunday
but every day.

Amen.
